

Sinclair
Broadcasting has decided to abuse
their media power by forcing an anti-Kerry
documentary onto the air just before a
major presidential election.

This is as clear an example as we will ever need of how dangerous media
consolidation is.

The airwaves belong
to US, the public,
NOT to Sinclair, and
they have a moral duty to respect
that. It is clear
from this behavior
that corporations
cannot be trusted to use monopoly media
positions fairly,
and they should not,
therefore, be allowed to achieve
such dominance.

Media ownership
rules need to be revised to force a
greater dispersal,
rather than
consolidation, of media assets.
